PECCAVI! PECCAVI!!

The Colonist feels easier this morning, after its candid acknowledgment, that THE TIMES having so thoroughly exposed the organ's systematic "fibbing," in the attempt to boom English Bay lands, and being completely worsted in the controversy, and deeming discretion the better part of valor, the organ announces its withdrawal from the discussion. The "figgers" were given by the Colonist as being substantially correct, but when probed and analyzed by THE TIMES were found to be glaringly misleading. We exposed its misrepresentations, and for so doing we naturally ruffled the usual serenity of the ancient dame of the Colonist, who since then has winced like unto a galled jade at the castigation administered. Declining to be warned by the fate of ancient fibbers, as recorded in Holy Writ, we fear there is little hope for the conversion of our erring brother into ways that are truthful and upright. The task appears to be a hopeless one; yet we will not despair of it, and with the assurance that from our watch-tower we will not be slow in pointing out its inaccuracies, for the time being we again leave it alone with its gods.

In closing the discussion THE TIMES has to refer to the three closing sentences in the Colonist's article of Wednesday. We are no more wedded to Coal Harbor than to any other section of the province. From the first we have held that a considerable town must arise at the terminus, wherever it was finally located. That is still our belief; it is the belief of every discerner of the times in the Dominion, outside the Colonist office and the coterie who assemble there a la the Tailors of Tooley Street. It is our firm conviction that the growth and prosperity of all our cities and towns must prove of immense advantage to Victoria's onward progress. Having already the start of every city in the province, as well as all others on the Sound, if proper energy and discretion is used, she can always maintain the lead, no matter what rivals may arise. A stern chase is a long race, and having unrivalled advantages in her favor, Victoria's position is assured beyond peradventure. THE TIMES is not so sectional in its views as not to hope that other centres of trade will be forthcoming in the future, for such a condition of affairs is as certain as that the sun will rise to-morrow. None knows this better than the Colonist, hence its pitiable wailings, which are calculated to create a feeling of alarm and uneasiness. We have the interests of this city as much at heart as has the Colonist; but cannot deny to other sections that which we claim for ourselves, namely, a fair field and no favor in the race for permanent supremacy.

The Colonist sneeringly refers to THE TIMES as eking out an existence. Nothing would delight the green-eyed editor of our contemporary more than the withdrawal of THE TIMES from the scene of action here. That much to be desired end to him, is not just yet. It ill becomes the Colonist to charge any of its contemporaries with eking out an existence. People who live in glass houses should not throw stones. Doubtless the Colonist is under the belief that others are in the same box in which its proprietor found himself for many years in his early struggles, anterior, of course, to the "Edgar balm" epoch in his history. Why the Colonist trots out and airs its puppyism in affairs which do not come within its purview is a matter of surprise. It will persist, however, in making an ass of itself; for instead of remaining silent on a topic that is purely one concerning THE TIMES itself —and for which the public would give the Colonist credit for being a juvenile owl—it rushes into places where angels would fear to tread. THE TIMES pays its bills as promptly as does the Colonist—the public say more so, and they should know. Our advertising patronage is as satisfactory—barring the government slices—as is that of the Colonist. Advertisers who have tested the two journals award the preference to THE TIMES on account of its charges and excess of circulation. It is a matter that can be demonstrated beyond cavil that while the circulation of the Colonist is dwindling away—becoming "smaller by degrees and beautifully less"—that of THE TIMES is bounding upwards. A year ago the subscription price of the Weekly Colonist was $3. Finding the ever popular WEEKLY TIMES making tremendous inroads upon that which the Colonist claimed as its "exclusive" demesne, a reduction to $2.50 was deemed necessary; but still THE TIMES' vision pursued it. This year a reduction in the size of our contemporary's weekly edition of one-fourth was deemed prudent as well as a further reduction in its subscription price to $2, and yet THE TIMES' shadow pursues the Colonist. We have kept on in the even tenor of our way, determined to fulfil our mission of giving our subscribers and patrons the best possible value for their money. That our efforts are being appreciated we leave the public to judge. Such in brief is the history of the "miserable existence THE TIMES is eking out," and the vast wealth the Colonist is accumulating so rapidly.

THE Canadian Pacific Railway Company's bill for transport service in connection with the Northwest rebellion will be sufficient to pay one year's interest upon their twenty-two million dollar loan from the government.

THE "MAIL" ON THE INDIANS.

The Toronto Mail says: The Indian problem, which has long been before the people of the United States, now threatens to impose itself upon Canada. Hitherto civilization in the Northwest has not incommoded the aborigine. He felt none of its cramping effects until 1882, when the railroad penetrated his country and administered the coup de grace to the last herd of buffalo. Since then the tide of immigration has steadily rolled westward, and the great Cree and Blackfoot nations, once hereditary foes, now find themselves beleaguered by a common enemy on the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains. Accordingly they have buried their tribal animosities, and cemented an alliance for the purpose, so the missionaries believe, of making a last stand against the evader. Including the Bloods, Piegans and other Blackfeet in Montana, there are not fewer than thirty thousand savages on that slope with whom civilization must settle before long. In the United States no general uprising of Indians extending over so vast a tract as this has ever occurred, for the simple reason that so large a horde has never before been thrust into a corner. This is really the first opportunity the North American Indian has had of showing whether he can carry on a race war on a formidable scale against the forces that make for his extinction. Across the line tribal insurrections have been of only too frequent occurrence, but circumstances have never been favorable to the upheaval of a grand combination of Indians such as that now formed between the Crees to the north and the Blackfeet to the south of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The region lying between the Battle River and the boundary is as fine a field as the continent affords for the employment of Indian methods of warfare; whilst in the well-stocked cattle, sheep and horse ranches lying almost contiguous to the Blackfoot reserves the alliance would find a solution of the supply question for at least a twelve month. Beyond doubt a general rising in that quarter would be a very serious affair. There is no occasion for alarm, but it is evident the position is critical. The Indians are "working at something in the dark, as the frontiersman puts it, and that bodes no good.

MORLEY ON HOME RULE.

MR. JOHN MORLEY, in his speech at Newcastle, declared himself decidedly in favor of conceding Home Rule to Ireland. MR. MORLEY said that he was surprised at the levity with which the crisis was met and with which many considered the concession of self-government to Ireland. MR. MORLEY said that some proposed to grant to the Irish Provincial Councils, on an elective basis, and then to use the whole force of the Empire to secure the fulfilment of contracts, to enforce the payment of rents, and to make the people leave one another in peace. MR. MORLEY declares that any such scheme must prove a failure. The Spectator dissents from MR. MORLEY'S view, and asks why such a scheme should fail when it was tried in part only under EARL SPENCER, and succeeded. We shall soon have the whole subject very fully discussed in Parliament. The speech of MR. WEBSTER on Home Rule is generally taken as a sufficient indication of the course that the government intend taking, and LORD SALISBURY in all probability will be allowed to defend himself against the attacks of MR. PARNELL and his followers, without, for the time at least, any interference on the part of MR. GLADSTONE. The chief danger of such a course will be in the development of such an anti-Irish feeling as may stand in the way of those who may take up the question in a friendly spirit with a determination to seek a solution consistent with the unity of the Empire and deserving the earnest sympathy and support of the Irish people.

BRITISH trade has been reported so bad during the past year that protectionists have cherished the hope that the nation might be persuaded to abandon the free trade, which the average Briton regards as a part of his personal freedom. Notwithstanding this depression emigration has fallen off considerably. A hazy and indefinite promise of three acres and a cow is supposed to have exercised a most potent influence upon the rural electors. Canada's offer of 160 acres is comparatively disregarded. SIR JOHN MACDONALD'S further promise of a whole herd of cows was not made in time to affect last year's emigration. The three acres and a cow story is ridiculed in England because the prospect held out to the rural voter seems too good to be realized. Why is Hodge so fascinated by the idea of three acres and a cow in England and so indifferent to Canada's 160 acres? Because without some assistance the 160 acres in Canada are worth about as much to Hodge as 160 acres in the moon would be. He would give 150 of his 160 acres for a cow. One cow to start with in the new country would be worth all SIR JOHN'S herd in the distant future.

THE largest price by the square inch ever paid for a painting was lately given by the Duc d'Aumale for the "Three Graces," by RAPHAEL, from Lord DUDLEY'S gallery. The price was $125,000, or, as the picture is only seven inches square, $2755 per inch.

The Queen's Speech

Her Majesty opens the Imperial Parliament To-day in Person.

Great Pomp—Brilliant Gathering of England's Nobility.

Radical Legislation for Ireland Not Foreshadowed.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The weather to-day is inauspicious for the re-appearance of the Queen in public. It was dull and dreary all day, and the streets are covered with snow and slush. Promptly at 11.20 a. m., the Royal party left Buckingham Palace for the House of Lords. The route of the royal party had been covered with gravel. This prevented the horses from falling and enabled a more rapid progress to be made. Her Majesty rode in an open carriage, drawn by eight horses. The household cavalry acted as an escort to the Queen. A large crowd lined the streets through which the royal procession passed, and Her Majesty was greeted with hearty cheers all along. The scene in the House of Lords was very brilliant. The peers and peeresses, judges, ministers and bishops, were present in large numbers, in full court dress. Gas light was used in the chamber, owing to the absence of the sun. This enhanced the beauty of the scene, showing more fully the brilliancy of the jewels and the splendor of the dresses worn by those present. The Queen looked as if she was suffering from cold.

Her Majesty in her speech said her relations with the other powers continue friendly. The differences with Russia regarding the Afghanistan boundary have been satisfactorily adjusted. She trusts that the work of the Russia-English frontier demarcation commission has already been far advanced and may tend to secure a continuance of peace in Central Asia. Referring to the rising in Eastern Roumelia Her Majesty said the object in the negotiations which followed the outbreak have been to bring the inhabitants of that country, according to their wish, under the Prince of Bulgaria rule, while maintaining unimpaired the essential rights of the Sultan. The Queen regrets that she has been compelled to declare war against King Thebaw, of Burmah, owing to acts of hostility by himself and subjects. The gallantry of the forces under General Prendergast had rapidly overthrown the Burmese forces, and she had decided that the most certain method of ensuring peace was to be found in a permanent incorporation of Burmah with her Empire. Negotiations respecting the rights of the French on the coast of New Foundland have been satisfactorily concluded. With Spain also an agreement had been reached giving the British the same commercial rights as the Germans in the Caroline Islands. Parliament would be asked to adopt certain measures rendered necessary by the convention relative to international copyright to which the Queen has agreed.

Turning to internal affairs the Queen said:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons, my Lords and Gentlemen:—I regret to say that no material improvement can be noted in the condition of trade or agriculture. I feel the deepest sympathy for the great number of persons, in many avocations of life, who are suffering under the pressure which, I trust, will prove transient. I have seen with deep sorrow a renewal since I last addressed you of the attempt to excite the people of Ireland to hostility against legislative union between that country and Great Britain. I am resolutely opposed to any disturbance of that fundamental law, and in resisting it I am convinced that I shall be heartily supported by my Parliament and my people. The social, no less than the material condition of that country engages my anxious attention. Although there has been during the last year no marked increase of serious crime, there is in many places a concerted resistance of enforcement of legal obligations, and I regret that the practice of organized intimidation still continues to exist. I have caused every exertion to be used for the detection and punishment of these crimes, and no effort will be spared on the part of my government to protect my Irish subjects in the exercise of their legal rights, and in the enforcement of individual liberty. If, as my information leads me to apprehend, the existing provisions of laws should prove to be inadequate to cope with those growing evils, I shall look with confidence to your willingness to invest my government with all necessary powers. Bills will be submitted for transferring to representative councils in counties of Great Britain local business which is now transacted by Courts of Quarter Session and other authorities. The measure for the reform of county government in Ireland is also in preparation. These measures will involve the consideration of the present incidence of local burdens. A bill for facilitating the sale of glebe lands in a manner adapted to the wants of the rural population, will also be introduced. Bills for removing the difficulties which prevent an easy and cheap transfer of land, for mitigating the distressed condition of the poorer classes in the western Highlands of Ireland and Scotland, for the more effectual prevention of accidents in mines, for extending the powers of the Railway Commission in respect to the regulation of rates, and for the codification of criminal law will also be considered. A prompt and effective dispatch of important business, which in ever growing proportion falls to you to transact, will I doubt not occupy your attention. In these and in all other matters pertaining to your high functions, I earnestly commend you to the keeping and guidance of Almighty God.

THE LORDS.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—In the House of Lords the Duke of Abercorn moved an address in reply to the speech from the Throne. He spoke of the grave responsibilities of those who directed the affairs of this government, and said that a cloud hung over the Empire, and that was the state of Ireland. He mentioned a number of duties which the government must perform in relation to that country, among which were the maintenance of peace, the suppression of persecutions, of which he said the National League was guilty, and the defence of the loyal Irish minority. He said no statesman, whatever he might be, would sacrifice the interests of this country. Earl of Southborough seconded the motion of the Duke of Abercorn. Lord Granville congratulated Salisbury, Prime Minister, on his possession of two such eloquent supporters.

THE COMMONS.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—In the House of Commons, Donnelly, Nationalist member for Longford, gave notice that he would ask leave to introduce a bill to amend the Irish Land Act. This announcement was received by loud cheers from the Home Rule members.

FINANCIAL.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Consols opened, 100 3-16, for both money and account. Bank of England has reduced rate of discount from 4 to 3 per cent.

MAINLAND WEATHER.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Jan. 21.—The minimum thermometer last night, 11 deg. above zero; at 9 o'clock this morning, 14 deg. Barometer at 6 last night, 29.51; at 9 this morning, 30.24. Ice almost stationary, with occasional open spaces; wind light, from N. E. At Matsqui the thermometer dropped to 7 deg. above zero last night. Fort Moody reports very cold weather during the night, but the harbor comparatively clear of ice. The steamer Teaser arrived from Victoria at 4:30 p. m. yesterday and encountered no ice en route.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Jan. 21.—At 3 p. m. the thermometer was 20 deg.; barometer still rising; ice moving out with the tide. Small boats continue to cross the river.

REMARKABLE RESUSCITATION.

An Ottawa Girl's Narrow Escape from Premature Burial.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—The little three-year-old girl named Hortubise, of Gatineau Point, reported on Monday as having been choked to death by swallowing a pin, has been restored in a most wonderful manner. She apparently died after suffering indescribable agony for 24 hours, and the parents were frantic with grief. Preparations were made for the funeral, and everybody who had known her mourned the demise of the young sufferer. After watching the prostrate body for several hours signs of animation were visible, and it was at once ascertained that she had been only in a comatose state. A physician was immediately summoned, and announced the glad tidings that the spark of life was not extinct. By careful treatment the little girl was gradually brought around. The pin, after a series of attempts, was dislodged from her throat, and she is now convalescent.

DID HE TAKE A SCALP?

The Charge Against Captain Howard Repeated with Further Particulars.

A Montreal dispatch says: All the French-Canadian papers have furious editorial articles against Capt. Howard, who has been charged with scalping the dead at Batoche. The captain's partial denial has only increased their bitterness against him. Howard's friends here did not at first believe the charge, but now public opinion appears to have come to the conclusion that he has convicted himself. The Post of Monday evening not only repeated the charge, but gave additional particulars. It says that when Captain Howard was in the act of scalping the dead man he found that his own knife was not sharp enough, and borrowed the knife of a non-commissioned officer belonging to one of the battalions that was engaged in the fight. The Post challenges Howard to name any of the Canadian officers who, as he alleges, "helped themselves to hairy souvenirs" and, in the name of the Canadian militia, denies the charge. Officers who served in the campaign, and who know Howard well, speak highly of him. They say that if there is any truth in the charge they believe that it was not a half breed, but a Sioux Indian, who lost his hair. If this can be established, Howard's position here will be improved; but if it is proved that a half breed lost his locks by Howard's knife, then there may be trouble when he returns to Montreal, as he is likely to do in a few days. There are only three men in Montreal, two staff officers and a newspaper correspondent, who were at Batoche, and they refuse to speak about it.

MARINE NOTES.

The bark Spartan was at Hongkong on the 9th inst., for this port.

The Queen of the Pacific leaves at noon to-morrow for San Francisco.

The tug Alexander, with railway inspection party on board, returned last evening from Nanaimo.

The tug Holyoke will undergo repairs at North Seattle. Capt. Nickels estimates the cost at $1500.

The Princess Louise will run to Burrard Inlet until further notice, or until the ice leaves the Fraser. The people of Granville will continue to pray for frosty weather at New Westminster, in the full belief that the prayers of the righteous availeth much.

POLICE COURT.

(Before E. Johnson, S. M.)

Geo. Anderson, charged with being drunk; defendant did not file an appearance and his bail was ordered to be estreated.

Thos. Allan pleaded guilty to being drunk, and was invited to contribute $5 to the city exchequer or languish in the city gaol one week.

Alfred Hall, charged with assaulting a Chinaman named Ah Fang, on the 15th inst. Mr. Gunnaway appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. C. J. Phillips on behalf of the defence. The evidence was very contradictory, but the weight of it went to prove the innocence of the defendant, and the magistrate dismissed the charge.

The Chinese burglar, captured by several of his countrymen last night when in the act of robbing the premises next door to On Hing's, and handed over to Sergt. Sheppard, was committed for trial at next assizes. The twin pair of knives with which he was armed, and the hatchet, worn on the table in the police court room, and they were certainly murderous looking weapons.

Ayer's pills cure constipation, improve the appetite, promote digestion, restore healthy action, and regulate every function. They are pleasant to take, gentle in their operation, yet thorough, searching, and powerful in curing disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, being highly concentrated, expels a scrofulous taint, and purifies effectually the blood. Hence it is the best blood medicine. It is also unsurpassed as a tonic. Quality and not quantity should be considered.

PASTURES AND WINTER FEEDING.

At the annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, during its session at Belleville on the 12th instant, PROF. ROBERTS, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., delivered an able and instructive address on "How to Improve Pastures and Winter Feeding," which we deem of so much interest to our agricultural readers and stock ranchers that we give herewith a full synopsis thereof:

Since all flesh is grass, he said, we must turn our first attention to the pasture. Most farmers think that manure and fertilizers are about as good as thrown away unless they are applied to grass lands. Usually everything is saved to enrich the tobacco patch and the wheat field. The true policy is to put nearly all the manure and fertilizers where they will tend to produce most grass. I think it would be found that where the value of the land does not exceed $150 per acre, permanent pasture properly treated, would be found to be more profitable than seeding. We find many old permanent pastures where a critical examination will show that hardly half of the ground is actually covered with grass. An analysis will show but a slight difference if any, in their composition, yet the one will nourish and be eaten with a relish, while the other, if it can be eaten at all, will prove to be indigestible. We find a vast difference between the grasses grown on starved land and those grown on improved and highly fertilized land. No cattle foods are so cheap and healthful as undried grass and clover. Hence it is the very worst economy to starve or overstock pasture. To relieve and fertilize them to some extent feed a partial ration of bran daily. In the fall pull the larger ears to feed the pigs and give the smaller ones with the green corn stalks to the cattle. Sow German potash salts, a hundred pounds to the acre, for five years, roll the pastures, pick the stone off, spread all the old mortar, coal ashes, half-rotten straw, with odds and ends of every kind on the poorer places; then, if possible, spread good farm-yard manure all over them from fence to fence. Remember that the beginning of successful dairying is found in the pasture field. Cattle may be cheaply and successfully wintered with but little hay, if there is a fair amount of straw and corn stalks on hand in the barn. We have found that the most economical way of securing hay is to sow clover and timothy in the growing wheat, the latter in the fall, the former in the spring. The following year the land produces a very heavy yield, which is made into hay. If the second growth is saved for hay we can get on an average from two cuttings three and a half tons tons per acre. We find that if this land is saved for mowing purposes the second year that the yield of hay is lessened from 20 to 40 per cent. We find also that we secure far better results by sowing our grass and clover in the growing fall wheat instead of sowing it alone. For the wheat and the grass start early in the spring and keep down the weeds, which, as a rule, are but annual plants, thus giving the grass full possession of the land as soon as the grain is harvested. While, on the other hand, if the grass is left alone to battle with the weeds in its weak condition the weeds being the stronger and faster growing plants soon appropriate the soil and sun to themselves, so that at harvest time, instead of having a crop of wheat and a field well seeded, we have a crop of weeds and little or no grass. The supposition is that every farmer understands the economy well enough to keep the straw where it is dry and accessible. Without doubt it is economy to have some succulent food to mix with the dry fodders. Mangolds grow far better than turnips in some portions of Canada and in portions of the United States. We have the choice of some localities between the ensilage, turnips and mangolds. I disprove of the ensilage by saying that no dairy farmer will feed it. Climate and condition will decide the choice between turnips and mangolds. Last year, on the University farm, 1¼ acres were cultivated to sugar beets and mangolds, with the following results: Roots, 22 tons per acre; tops, 9 tons per acre. In Canada it will cost from twelve to sixteen cents per day to feed a thousand pound cow in full milk or a fattening steer of the same weight, and from six to eight cents per day to feed a dry cow. Since the manure is worth about half the cost of the feed the stable floors should be high. The manure of the dairy is of more importance than the milk, though it is usually not worth as much. If the milk is wasted and the manure saved one will soon drift from dairying into profitable beef and cattle raising, and the farm will be increasing in value and fertility. If the manure is wasted and the milk saved, one may go on swimmingly for a few years, but the grand children will have to flee to the city to escape the poor-house. Labor must be economized. To do this the land must be enriched. How shall we begin? By mending the stable floor. Half of the manure is often lost before it leaves the stable, and half of the remainder before it is converted into an available form and used by the plants. Let me tell you an open secret which should be repeated from every stable door in Canada. Profitable farming intelligence and education depend more on the fertility of the soil than upon any other one thing. Then husband and transport to the field in the best shape everything that will make plants grow, and then you will have to take no thought for the morrow what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, or wherewithall ye shall be clothed. Feed the land and verily thou shalt be fed. I think I hear you saying, Professor, all this sounds very nice, but the good wife and I have worked hard and faithfully all summer, and we are no better off than we were last year at this time, and it has been just so for several years, and the children are getting larger, and the farm is getting poorer, and we are getting older, and we would send James and John to Cornell or to Guelph, only we are too poor! And still it is said farming don't pay. This appears to be a truthful, fair statement, but is it? Let us see. I doubt whether there are two farmers in this vast audience who can tell how much they were worth at any time within the last five years. How many inventories did the farmer of Canada take Jan. 1, 1885 or 1887? Pardon me if I say that I doubt if one former in the house ever approximated the profits and losses of the farm for any year since he began business. They say farmers are always grumbling either on account of the seasons, the hard work, the hard times or the laws. Let me make a few practical suggestions. Now, the first thing for us to do is to do our duty. Stop grumbling and give thanks. We have been bountifully fed and clothed and comfortably housed. We have been protected in person and property, and have had many spare moments for gaining knowledge and pleasure from current publications furnished at nominal cost, and in addition we have had all the delights and health of rural life. Let us rise to the dignity of our profession, and with cheerful courage attack the knotty problems that stand in the way of greater success. First, let us find out what is our own and what belongs to somebody else; that is, take stock and face our debts. Many a man has been bankrupt because he had not the moral courage to add up the debtor side of the account. Second, let us stop the leaks. Five cents a day saved from the time a young man is married till his eldest son is ready to enter college will pay all necessary expenses of a four years' course, or it will give him a nice start in life. I doubt if there is a dozen farms in Eastern Ontario where not five cents, but ten times five cents could be saved daily by a little painstaking, intelligent care. Suppose we take a farm of average productive capacity of 100 acres, 50 acres of which is in pasture and meadow, and 50 acres in other crops. I think you will all agree with me that the average production per acre in Canada can and ought to be doubled. But if this be done on both sides of the line we shall glut the market, and it is always a bad policy as well as a very disagreeable task to try to sell what nobody wants to buy. Suppose we seed to grass three quarters of the farm instead of one-half, then we shall have only about one-half as much work to do. The cattle will wade in grass up to their eyes; the farm may be increased in fertility, and we shall realize as many dollars from half as many acres on account of the diminished expenses and increased yield and price. True, we shall not get double the yield per acre at first, but by the time we do, say 10 to 20 years, the increased population will take all we can raise at a fair price. Then instead of trying so hard to increase the bank account let us by the most judicious and careful management and economy try to make the soil more productive for the amount of labor spent upon it. No bank cashier can run away with the plant food safely stored up in the land ready to be turned into golden grain whenever the dwellers of the city are ready to give us a liberal price for our products.

THE statistics of Clyde shipbuilding for the year 1885 disclose the existence of a depression of almost unprecedented severity. The total number of vessels launched during the 12 months was 241, and the tonnage was 103,458. Last year when trade was supposed to be at the lowest ebb, the output reached a total of 206,854 tons—103,396 tons more than during the present year. The returns from several of the shipbuilding yards bring out in sharp relief the extent of the depression. In some cases the output was nil, while in other yards the reduction is measured by thousands of tons.

THE Chicago Herald says that a Chicago gents' furnishing house employs a female commercial traveler and that the young men who usually keep that kind of stores buy of her as if they hadn't seen a commercial traveler for six months.

THE SUSSEX AWARDS CASE.

CITY AND PROVINCE.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE PREMIER'S "MILLIONS IN IT" VANISHES LIKE MELTING SNOW.

To THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

MR. EDITOR:—At the time the Coal Harbor extension bill passed the Local House, one of the great arguments advanced by Mr. Smithe in its favor was the enhanced value of the surrounding lands, and the immense revenue the province would derive from the sale thereof. I believe the gentleman placed the value of these lands at several thousand dollars per acre. At the same time a correspondent of THE TIMES pointed out the fact, that owing to the government giving the C. P. R. such a large quantity of land in a compact block, the company would naturally place the town—"the location of which is entirely at their option"—near the centre of their own property as possible; and that for years the best portion of their property would be comparatively valueless, or no more value in fact than the government land east of Fort street. Should the terminus have selected there. How fully has the correspondent's prediction come to fact, and how small fades away the Chief Commissioner's boast in his sale of real estate agent, in the face of the home realized; for instead of bringing thousands as were the most valuable lots with water frontage only averaged $2 per acre, "not so much as lots in the towns of Moga and Yale in the early days," while lots situated in what ought to be the principal part of the so-called town, dwindled down to sales at $60, $30 and $10, and on getting over a water lot, from the water it went for from $40 to $15 per acre. In fact, $50 acre blocks. Further comment is unnecessary, as it is now well known that the owner is confined with regard to more than one-third of the area of land survey of the townsite, which has not been done. But there is still another matter in connection with these sales to which I should like to call attention, and which is worthy of the earnest consideration of every man who has the well being of the province at heart. I refer to the large importation of agricultural products from the States during the present season. It seems that a man who has a pre-emption claim over three quarters of a mile from the shore, although 5 miles of it is very expensive for road purposes, has to pay $2 per acre for land (for agricultural purposes) more than
